

How to Profit From Overpriced Options

If you trade options, price is paramount.

An overpriced option, like an overpriced stock, can adjust downward without warning, reducing or eliminating possibilities for resale.

Even if it doesn't adjust, paying too much for an option contract will reduce any profit you receive.

Markets were in a downtrend on multiple time frames – with fear and uncertainty rampant.

Do you ride the wave to go short? Do you bottom fish and try to go long on dips?

Or is there a high-odds option strategy you can use to profit in both directions!?

This is an interesting discussion and you will enjoy and learn from.
